Republican Senators.

the Passage of the Law-privileges and elections of the Senate on the I to repeal the federal election laws was laid before that body yesterday. It begins with a reference to the attempt in 1890 to pass the so-called force bill, citing the provisions of that proposed law. Concerning it the committee say:

ure will ever be revived. The control of national legislation in this country will be for some time beyond the reach of the republican party, and we believe that it is the desire of a majority of the people that the experiment should be fully tried whether existing laws and an improving public sentiment will not cure the evils complained of. But the question now raised is a wholly different one. It is proposed to overthrow all the existing provisions of national legislation for securing honesty in elections for members of the national House of Representatives. These provisions were enacted largely for the security of elections in northern cities, at a time when the republican party, which enacted them, was in control of nearly all the southern states. While there had been great crimes upon the elective franchise and upon the rights of citizens in other parts of the Union, yet the laws now in force were passed chiefly in consequence of frauds and crimes which had been committed by the democratic party in the city of New York, under the leadership of Wm. M. Tweed and his associates, and those laws commended themselves alike to his republican opponents and to many reputable and judicious democrats.

In Power. "We are certainly bound to oppose with all our might any attempt to overthrow or destroy at the south the rights of American citizenship vindicated by the war, or protected by the measures of reconstruction which followed it. Now, however, we are resisting an attempt to do much more than that, an attempt to break down securities for honest elections throughout the entire country; securities needed quite as much, and perhaps more, in the states of the north than they are elsewhere. Certainly there can be no pretense that the existing election laws have anywhere prevented the casting and counting, freely and fairly, of the full democratic vote of the country. That party has lately won a national victory, obtaining control of the presidency and both houses of Congress without any complaint that it has been unduly interfered with or obstructed. The democratic party, if it be in danger today of losing the political power it has gained, is in danger from the disgust of its own better elements and from its better sentiments. the entire country; securities needed quite

"But whatever may be the motives of its authors, the repeal bill itself is an unprovoked and needless movement to stir up sectional bitterness, to degrade the national authority, and to encourage fraud, intimidation and violence in elections.

Mr. Cleveland Quoted. The report says that a careful consideration of the election statutes does not show any sound reason for their repeal, that they do not interfere at any time, by one hair's breadth, with the performance of their com-plete functions by the state elections offi-cers, that there is only a mild and moder-ate use of the national power to aid in se-curing honest results in the election of the popular branch of Congress, which is such an important depositary of national power. It quotes from distinguished democrats who attested to the usefullness of the laws, who attested to the usefullness of the laws, and calls attention to the fact that President Cleveland has never recommended their repeal. Continued frauds argue, the committee says, in favor of the retention of the laws, and they hold that the clamor for their repeal would be more defensible if the local laws of the states were sufficient. The report alludes to the defeat of Judge Maynard in New York, and says that if those who deprecated his crime committed in the name of democracy had the fullest measure of sagacity and courage they measure of sagacity and courage they would stop the movement to repeal the national election laws. The argument that the laws are unconstitutional is held to be the laws are unconstitutional is held to be James A. and Cora Cullinane, aged three year and nine mouths.

Small purses of suede leather are made on purpose for rings, or any soft pouch of skin or chamois may be used to place the rings in when desiring to carry them around with one. They should never be put in the ordinary pocket book, as the rubbing against coins is also bad for them. Diamonds can be cleaned at home to look as well as when done by a jeweler if only a as well as when done by a jeweler if only a little trouble is taken. They should be thoroughly cleaned in alcohol and then dried in boxwood sawdust. Pine sawdust is too olly for this purpose.

Federal Election Repeal Denounced by the There Will Be a Number of Important

A Partisan Review of the Causes for Admirals Belknap, Benham and Irwin to Go Out of Active Service-

A number of very important changes in the navy will occur during the early spring consequent upon the retirement of three rear admirals and resulting promotions all along the line. The first retirement will be that of Admiral George E. Belknap, whose service on the active list will end on the 22d instant. On the same date Commodore "It is not likely that this particular meas-John G. Walker, now on special duty in Washington, will be promoted to the grade of rear admiral, and will relieve Admiral Belknap of his duties as president of the naval inspection board, with headquarters at the Navy Department. The next important retirement will be that of Rear Admiral A E. K. Benham, commanding the South Atlantic station. He was recently in command of the North Atlantic, or home, station, but was detached from that duty when it became necessary to send his flagship, San Francisco, to the Brazilian station. It is expected that he will arrive at Rio today or tomorrow. He will relieve Capt. Picking of command of the United States forces at Rio at once. Capt. Picking has been in command there ever since the summary detachment of Acting Rear Admiral Stanton, because of his premature recognition of the insurgents.

Admiral Benham's Service. Admiral Benham's service in Brazil, and in fact his active service in the United States navy, will terminate by his retirement April 10th next. Commodore Francis M. Ramsay, who has been on duty in this city for the past four years, as chief of the bureau of navigation, will be promoted to the grade of rear admiral on the same date and will soon thereafter be given an assignment more in accord with his increased signment more in accord with his increased rank, possibly the command of the Pacific or of the North Atlantic station. This latter command is now held by Acting Rear Admiral Stanton, who, however, was assigned thereto with the distinct understanding that he would be transferred to the command of the South Atlantic station on the retirement of Admiral Benham. It is regarded as certain that Commodore Ramsay will get an important sea command in the near future, even if it shall be found necessary to assign another officer to the command of the home station in the early spring.

The third retirement referred to is that of Rear Admiral John Irwin, now in command of the naval forces at Honolulu, who, up to a few weeks ago, was in command of the Asiatic station. He relieved Commodore Joseph S. Skerrett of duty at Honolulu, and the latter took his place on the Asiatic station. His service at the Hawaiian capital will be short, however, as under the law he goes on the retired list provoked and needless movement to stir up sectional bitterness, to degrade the national authority, and to encourage fraud, intimidation and violence in elections.

State Rights.

"The laws are to be destroyed for the purpose of offensively reasserting the old dogma of state sovereignty under which the attempted dissolution of the Union was defended in 1861. The repeal will proclaim that the state with its powers is to be magnified and honored; while the nation, with its powers duly exercised under express constitutional authority, is to be belittled and despised.

"Whatever may be the intent, the legal effect and real result of the legislation will be wholly pernicious and injurious to popular government throughout the United States.

"It was in view of the revolutionary plans" on the 15th of April, and thereby promotes

"It was in view of the revolutionary plans and the wicked and desperate crimes of the democrats of the south and New York city that Congress deemed it clearly wise and absolutely necessary to endeavor to prevent by legislation the recurrence of such atrocities. These events were the cause and justification of the various civil rights acts and national election statutes."

state of affairs in Hawaii and the necessity for a strong fleet of vessels to patrol the waters of Bering sea during the coming season for the enforcement of the regulations adopted at the Paris arbitration for the protection of the seal rookeries and ready stated, this command will be vacated in April next by the retirement of Admiral Irwin.
